This way, you can easily check whether youre dealing with the steam, grill, or fan function. If the symbol youre looking for isnt listed, take a look in the manual of your microwave. Other than that, the microwave is very suitable for boiling vegetables and potatoes. If you boil those in a microwave, you need far less water than you would in a pan. This way, the vitamins in the food are retained, and you wont pour them out with the water. Quickly defrost a slice of bread for breakfast, or minced meat for a pasta sauce. If you use the defrost mode on your microwave, you have to select the weight, after which the microwave activates with the right wattage and defrost time. The crisp function only works in combination with a crisper bowl or crisper dish. The extrahot dish heats the bottom, while the grill is aimed at the top of your dish. You can use the crisp function to speed up the cooking process, so you'll be able to serve a crispy dish quickly. In this mode, the microwave uses a fan to distribute the heat evenly throughout the room. The advantage of this is that you can bake relatively quickly. This position is less suitable for baking cakes, but for example an oven dish is fine. Fill this container with water and then put it in the microwave. In this way you prepare vegetables without losing taste, vitamins and structure. You use this stand when you start grilling a griddle. You also use the grill for gratinating a dish and for preparing meat, fish or vegetables. The grill is not recommended for preparing really thick cuts of meat. When you try to grill too thick, you will notice that it is difficult to cook the inside without burning the outside.

In this case, you use a part of the grill. Check carefully which part it is, so you can place the dish in the right spot. It's usually the middle of the grill. The extra heat from below ensures that your pizza gets a tasty crispy bottom. The pizza position can of course also be used for other dishes that require extra heat from below. You use this stand for example for au bain-marie or to bake a dish. But even with dishes that are baked at a high temperature, this stand is useful. With this stand you ensure that the bottom of a pizza or cake gets well warm without the top burning. Think, for instance, of an apple pie. If you only use the upper heating element, you can prevent your cake from getting a black crust. In this way, the microwave oven blows the hot air around your dish every so often, and larger pieces of meat and fish will also be well cooked. If you would only use the grill for larger pieces of meat and fish, you run the risk that the outside burns and the inside is still raw. They're so versatile in how you flavor them or what you use them for too. I found them to be a festive touch as glass daggers to my blood splatter cupcakes here. They look incredibly realistic and take mere minutes to whip up a unique cake topper. Believe it or not, most of the questions I get regarding my homemade hard candy recipe is for how to best apply it for a Frozen birthday party theme. When I initially created this recipe for my video, that never even occurred to me and about a year later when I finally watched it, I got what all the hype was about for this movie.

It's a very sweet movie but definitely a dramatic departure from Breaking Bad which is a great thing about this candy. You could turn them into lollipops or even edible diamond rings. It's crazy versatile. As you may or may not know, I don't watch a lot of television. I find most reality shows to be appalling and unless you're Nigella Lawson sashaying towards the camera, I don't even care to watch a cooking show however, I will make exceptions for my two favorite shows, The Walking Dead and Breaking Bad, the latter which is set to premiere its final season this Sunday. However, they will serve its purpose as I munch on these little Breaking Bad inspired jewels while I get my fix in two ways. Keep your eye on it so it doesn't overflow. Don't stir. Sugar syrup is dangerous. Use a large, heat proof measuring cup. Not all glass is made equal. It's best to use a digital candy thermometer. They're not very expensive and they'll be so invaluable for future candy making endeavors. This one is an economical choice while this one is a tried and true mat I've used for at least a decade. While you're exercising precaution, make sure the vessel you're cooking it in is microwave safe if you're utilizing the microwave. You can, of course always use the stovetop too. Not all containers are meant to be microwaved. I've tested this with honey and it's way too soft. They're better in a recipe like for my honeyherb cough drops. A must and will try. Love that blue color! You make it look so easy. I do like my cooking shows though I would love to see your blue tips!! He will love this candy. Clearly, I need to start watching! Looks fantastic. Have fun and keep a song in your heart. Lee. My kids would loveee this especially breaking part hahaha Got to try it on the weekend. Have a lovely day And I don't watch tv that often too, although when i do it's mainly cooking shows surprise. My friend's boyfriend hates tv, but then when Nigella Lawson appears on screen, he oddly gets very interested.

I wonder why. he also hates cooking, so. We do watch it through Netflix, though. Haven't ever watched Breaking Bad but it's on my "check it out" list. Boo! I have a picture of the blue tips on my blog somewhere. Mum used to make us little toffees with hundreds and thousands when we were kids but this looks like it might be the new version! I am a big fan of the show too and I am so curious to see what will happen. We have waited too long. Thank you for the wonderful idea. What a fun idea I def recommend it! I made a double batch, so the cooking time was a bit longer. Results exactly what I wanted in a fraction of the time of the stovetop method. Thanks for sharing this! Happy belated to your grandbaby. I'm trying to do an outdoor ice rink. Do you know if I'll be able to take it off in 1 piece and if I don't have a Matt like yours what can I use. This makes me very happy to hear. Good luck with the candy bar!! It came out great, but I was scrubbing my measuring cup for like 20 min. It's fun to make, but can be messy. Thanks for the tutorial. Dejadog from the Dog Brothers not the karate youtube channel I am throwing my son a Minecraft Birthday Party and was looking for something I could use as diamonds and this would be perfect. I can't wait to make it. Otherwise, if you keep it tightly wrapped and store it in a cool place, it should last for a week or two but it entirely depends on the humidity. Have a great day! This is the most important factor in ensuring that it sets. After spending an hour and a half stirring sugar and sweating over the stove, only to end up with caramel colored sticky ooze, I had to find another way. 7 minutes counting prep time and I have perfect glass. The hardest part about this recipe is cleaning the bowl after. Oh, and I did, only excitement, open the plastic wrap from the wrong side the second time. Two fingers are stinging and need some lavender oil to calm the burn. But our joy over our perfect glass is enough to ease the pain.

I am attempting one and like to make my own sugar than buying the crystals at the store. Thank you. Do you know what can I do to end up with the finish candy blue Thanks Perhaps your coloring wasn't saturated enough Molds are a fantastic option! We tried making this with the dark corn syrup and it tasted pretty bad. I may have burned it although I didn't know until after it cooled and we shattered it. It worked out perfectly, except it was not edible. Any add in suggestions to guarantee good flavor.

Should I switch to light corn syrup The most important aspect is to make sure it reaches 300 degrees. It's most accurate with a digital candy thermometer.
